This Japanese 35mm film rangefinder cameras (copy Leica) are a nice collector's item; for all four the following applies: the shutter works properly (all shutter speeds work; in Leotax T the shutter works but the shutter speeds have not all been verified); cloth curtains are efficient; the film transport works well; the self-timer of the Leotax T and K doesn't seem to work, but I'm not sure. Optical system: It has tiny dust (normal in cameras of this age); double image has good contrast; the viewfinder has good visibility. The Leotax T2 (1958), K (1955) and K3 (1958) have "Leotax Camera" written on top, while the Leotax T (1955) has written on top "Showa Optical". Aesthetically, the four cameras appears very well preserved: there are no tears in the leather cover, no bump and no corrosion to the paint. Cameras has not been used with film. Finally, it should be noted that the photos are part of the description. Tracked shipping. Shipping costs take into account the rate for insured shipping. ATTENTION: Shipping only in Europe.
