Undoubtedly one of the most anticipated instruments of the century, the original House Music was the brainchild of Brian May, which was born in the early 1970s to a small number of the public in the UK "Guitarists". The guitar is called "Red Special" of the Queen band, which has become a world guitar legend. The guitar is the first of the Queen "We are the Champions".

But the story did not end there. Working with Brian and his old guitar technician, Pete Mandrone, House Music founded Brian May Guitars in 2004 with the launch of a new "Speciale". With production re-located in one of the world's most respected instrument production facilities, the BMG Special has seen significant improvements in design, specifications and construction. The subsequent iterations released in 2006, 2012 and 2017, saw further updates and improvements to the Special bridge assembly, pickups, electronics, hardware, finishes and color choices.\r

Simply put, the best production guitar of the best artist in the world has constantly improved.\r

\r

The BMG Special is an extremely versatile and professional-level instrument designed not only to replicate the unique sound of one of the true heroes of rock 'n' roll, but also to provide modern musicians of all musical persuasions with the perfect guitar for any environment of performance.\r
