La Patente Europea del Computer (European Computer Driving Licence) è la certificazione che fin dalla metà degli anni '90 viene assegnata a coloro che portano a termine un percorso di formazione acquisendo competenze informatiche.

Nel 2020 cambia nome: nel vecchio continente si passa da ECDL (European Computer Driving Licence) a ICDL (International Certification of Digital Literacy), adottando l'appellativo già impiegato al di fuori dei confini europei. Il progetto ECDL/ICDL coinvolge ed è riconosciuto in oltre 150 paesi nel mondo con circa 15 milioni di candidati (solo in Italia 2,5 milioni di candidati).

ECDL/ICDL Full Standard è una delle poche certificazioni informatiche che, in Italia, abbia ottenuto l'accreditamento di ACCREDIA: una garanzia di valore, di spendibilità ed efficacia per il cittadino digitale, per l'impresa e per le Istituzioni.

Essa attesta il possesso di tutte quelle competenze che sono oggi necessarie per una piena cittadinanza digitale: quali saper usare gli strumenti di scrittura, di calcolo e di presentazione, e saper navigare in modo sicuro nel web utilizzando gli strumenti di collaborazione on line e i social network.

Tale certificazione è spendibile in ambito scolastico, universitario e nel mondo del lavoro.
